Garrison Keillor mines his recent stroke at the Moth

Posted in Own This City by Jane Borden on Nov 18, 2009 at 5:21pm

At last night's annual fundraiser for storytelling powerhouse the Moth, the superstars of the world of the narrative celebrated and gave their support. We asked each the same question: "What will be the opening line of your next memoir, real or imaginary?"

"If you know me, please don't read this." Jonathan Ames, essayist, HBO character

"I was completely unprepared for this." Sarah Jones, playwright

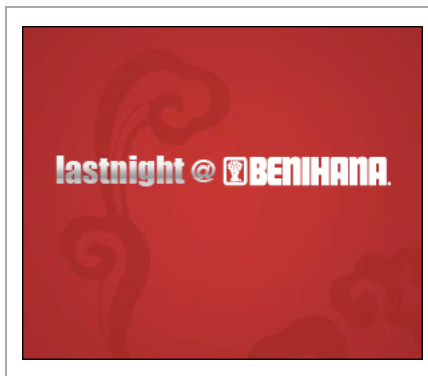

"Thank God for my two families, my original and my present." Albert Maysles, documentary filmmaker

"I am sitting in a Starbucks trying to fill the page so they'll pay me." Mike Birbiglia, comedian and author

"I wish I'd never gotten involved with storytelling." George Dawes Green, novelist and founder of the Moth
